14 Pianists Earn $15,000 in Concert for Moszkowski

Play at Same Time at Gala Testimonial for Polish Composer.

Fourteen world famous planists appeared last night at Carnegie Hall in a gala testimonial concert given for the benefit of the Polish planist and composer, Moritz Moszkowski, who is ill in Paris and without funds. The net profits of the concert amounted to $8,000. This sum, together with souvenir programs autographed by all the planists taking part, with one going to John Mc-Cormick, the highest bidder, for $1,00, and autographed etchings of Moszkowski. which were auctioned off during the intermission by Mme. Alma Gluck and Walter Damrosch, also with private donations, brought up the amount realized for Mr. Moszkowski to about $15,000.

The artists who took part were Back-us, Bauer, Casella, Friedman, Gabrilo-witsch, Grainger, Hutcheson, Lambert, Lhevinne, Ney, Ornstein, Schelling, Schnitzer and Stojowski.

Mr. Damrosch read letters of regret from Mero, Ganz, Bloomfield-Zeisler and Paderewski, all of which he prefaced by an appropriate speech by himself.

Brilliant Audience.

The event, which was one of the most remarkable of its kind on record, had been arranged by a committee of women with Mrs. Ernest Schelling as the treasurer. It was an event savoring not only of novelty, but of genuine excitement. A brilliant audience packed the auditorium. On the stage stood fourteen grand pianos. Fortunately, no more grand pianos. auditorium. On the stage stood fourteen grand pianos. Fortunately, no more than five different makes were required, for in certain numbers all the fourteen repainists appeared and played at once, and hence a task had been set the tuners to bring all the pianos into the most perfect accord possible.

In the matter of the order of appearance on the programme and position on the stage of the distinguished artists, the committee—not running the risk of any artistic heartburnings—had settled the difficulty by resorting to chance—the drawing of slips from a hat.

Schumann's "Carneval," the second number in the list, was without doubt the piece de resistance. All the artists being familiar with the work, so each of the twenty-two pieces, save the first and final ones, was played by a different pianist in rotation, the executant having drawn on a slip of paper his title, and several pianists drawing more than once. Gabrilowitsch gave the Pierrot. Bauer the Arlequin Lettres Dansantes, Schelling, Chopiu. The climax was reached in the final section, when all the players in

York city.

Mrs. Peabody came here about a year ago with two daughters by her first husband, the late Chester P. Siems of St. Paul, Minn, who died in New York on October 23, 1918. Mrs. Peabody came here about a year ago with two daughters by her first husband, the late Chester P. Slems of St. Paul, Minn, who died in New York on October 23, 1918.

That her husband had an ungovernable temper and treated her cruelly were among the allegations in the complaint of Mrs. Peabody, who told the court that she was married to Mr. Peabody two years ago, after knowing him but six weeks, and that she soon found out six weeks, and that she soon found out she could not live with him.

she could not live with him.

She alleged that her husband manifested a violent dislike for her three children by her first marriage, and elso for her mother. They went to live in her New York apartment and she alleged that her husband objected to the presence of any of her former husband's photographs in the rooms. Once, she asserted, he broke a photograph of one of his own children, believing it to be that of one of his wife's offsprings.

Mrs. Peabody also charged that her husband said he would kill her and himself if she ever left him. In spite of this she went to her mother's home in Minnesota. she could not live with him.

Mrs. Siems and Mr. Peahody were married on New Year's Day, 1926, in her home, 563 Park avenue, where she lived after the death of her first husband. The Rev. Theodore Sedgwick of Calvary Church officiated. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Lettita Magoffin, and Miss Eugenia Peahody, daughter of Mr. Peahody. Vernon Marguerite and Dorothy Shelby Siems, little daughters of the bride, were flower girls. Mr. Charles M. Peahody was best man Charles M. Peabody was best man for his father.
